The story of - Slavery 48 pages

What is a Slave?

Everyone owns something. It's theirs. It belongs to them. It's their property. Some people own great things. Like a house or a car. Others only own small things. For example a book, a photo or a hat.

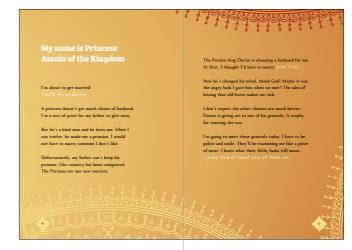

Slavery is when someone owns another person. That person is their slave, their property. Just as they own a dog, cat or horse. A slave is not someone like you or me. They are not free. They can't go where they want. They can't choose their job. They cannot decide for themselves where they want to live. Even worse, slave owners can do whatever they want with their slaves. They often punish them, with a lot of violence. And sometimes they even kill them. That has happened a lot in the past. Anyone can be a slave: boys and girls, men and women. Young and old.

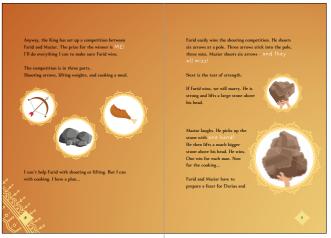

The story of - Sugar 48 pages

The words 'sugar' and 'honey' often appear in English pop songs. In Dutch: sugar and honey. But of course the singers mean something else by it. Sugar and honey also mean sweetheart in English. For thousands of years, English boys have called their girls 'honey'. But not sugar. That came much later. Why? Because most people didn't know what sugar was for a very long time. The following fairy tale shows how that changed...

The story of Citizenship 72 pages

Citizenship started a long time ago. 2500 years ago. This book tells you all about it.

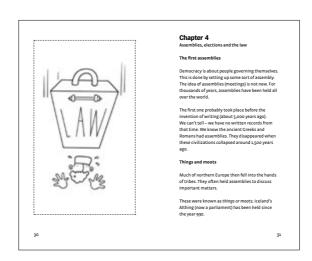

We are all citizens. Of a country and of the world. That means we are all equal. In real life and before the law. Kings and politicians can rule us, but they are not better than we are. That is the rule of citizenship. Citizenship gives us rights that can't be taken away. We can vote and be elected. We can have meetings and protest. But we also have duties. To help other people and not hurt them or our country.

The Story of Democracy 72 pages

Sometimes, it seems that democracy is a modern idea. But the first democracy was in Greece, 3,000 years ago. Since then, people have been fighting to keep it. And dictators and kings have tried to do away with it. But it still exists...

Most countries in the world are democracies. That means that people have more power than kings or dictators. Together, the people decide how a country is run. And if they don't like their rulers anymore, they elect others.

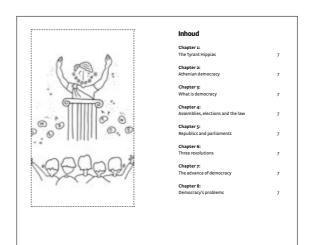

The story of Equality 72 pages

Real equality is difficult. But humans have been fighting for it for thousands of years.

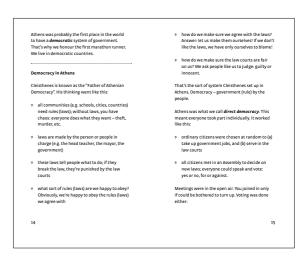

In principle, we know we are all equal. But reality shows us this is not true. Often, men earn more than women. White people have more opportunities than people who are not white. Rich people are more powerful than poor people. We don't listen to children very well. And in some countries, you are worth less when you are gay.

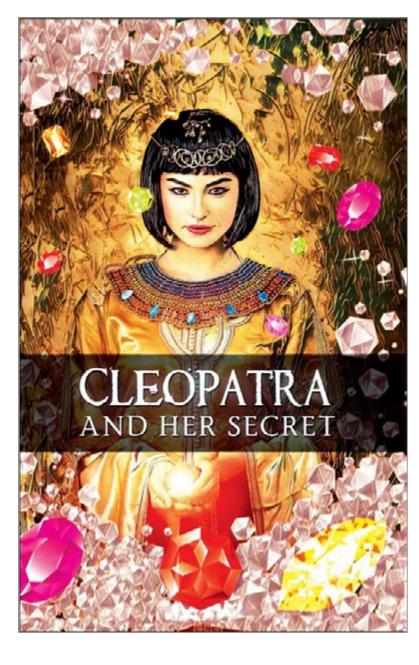

The story of Human rights 72 pages

The King of Babylon was the first to write down human rights. That was 3,750 years ago. From there, the idea of human rights spread everywhere.

Most religions in the world are based on 'the golden rule': treat others as you want to be treated. Human rights are about the same thing. They are made to make sure that everybody in the world has a fair go. That their rights are respected. That there is no torture, no slavery and that people are free to say what they want. That there is freedom of religion and freedom to protest.
