AUTHOR

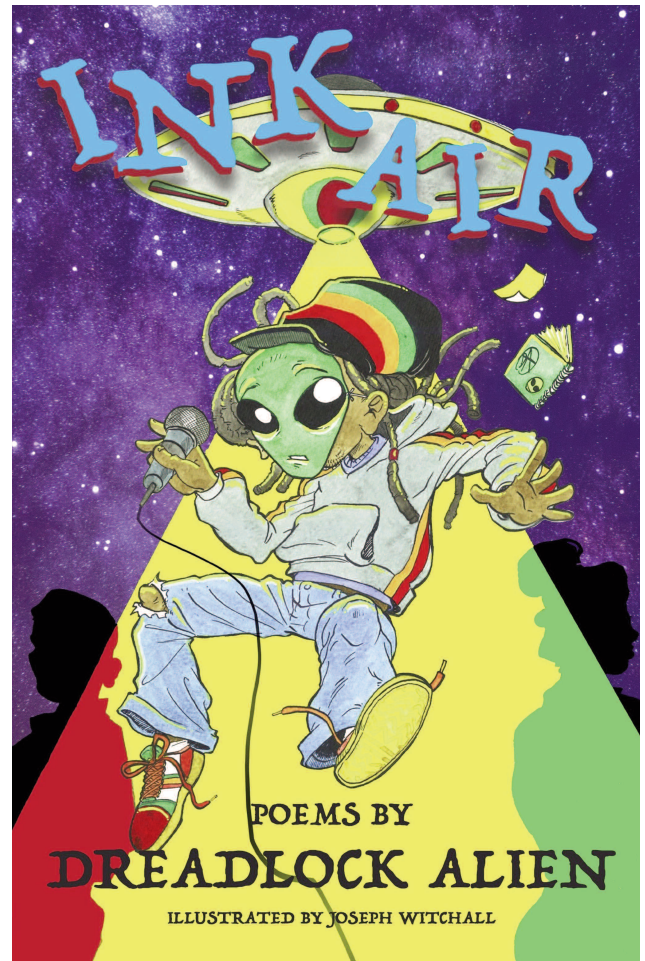

Richard Grant, aka Dreadlock Alien, is of mixed heritage and culture. As a spoken word poet his work has always been heard in the live arena, and now, with his first written anthology, it is adapted from the stage to the page for you to read, enjoy and be inspired!

Mad Grandad

My mad grandad is not like other folk
He plays silly tricks and he always has a joke
You'd better watch out on April fools day,
Sent my dad to school when it was Saturday.

He gets on my bike and pulls a real long skid
Grew up once but likes it better as a kid
He lets me wear my socks till they are well smelly
Midnight feasts of ice cream and jelly
We build sandcastles big enough to live in.
And when we arm wrestle he never wants to give in

KEY SELLING POINTS

- Perfect for performance - spoken out loud, sung with a little beat box!
- This collection is about the artist's school life experiences – both good and bad.
- The title poem Ink Air is about growing up in the UK care system without parents or family
